

THANKS TO WESTERN BIRDS' REVIEWERS AND ASSOCIATE EDITORS

Peer review is a critical step in the publication of a scientific journal. I thank the following people for their generosity in taking the time to provide this essential service sustaining the scientific quality of Western Birds for volume 49: Peter Adrians, Matt Bartels, C. Brown, M. Ralph Browning, B. Byers, Jay Carlisle, Christopher J. Clark, Charles T. Collins, Daniel S. Cooper, Chris Corben, Jeff N. Davis, Lucas H. DeCicco, Jon L. Dunn, Frank Fogarty, Geoff Geupel, Gary R. Graves, Robert A. Hamilton, Steven C. Heinl, P. Hendricks, David Irons, Joseph R. Jehl Jr., Doug Jenness, Andrew B. Johnson, Oscar Johnson, Peter E. Lowther, Bruce E. Lyon, Timothy D. Manolis, Steven G. Mlodinow, Joan L. Morrison, Ronald L. Mumme, Mars Muusse, Edward R. Pandolfino, David E. Quady, Bruce Rideout, Bryce W. Robinson, Gary H. Rosenberg, Stephen C. Rottenborn, Desmond Sieburth, Daniel S. Singer, Lynne Stenzel, John Tautin, Junior A. Tremblay, Ryan S. Terrill, Eric A. Van derWerf, Caroline Van Hemert, Sheri L. Williamson, and Christopher C. Witt.

In addition, our associate editors, Kenneth P. Able, Matthew J. Baumann, Daniel S. Cooper, Douglas W. Faulkner, Kimball L. Garrett, Daniel D. Gibson, Robert E. Gill, Ronald R. LeValley, Dan Reinking, and Daniel R. Ruthrauff, plus featured-photo editor John Sterling, also serve as reviewers of the manuscripts whose review they coordinate, and often of additional manuscripts at the request of other associate editors. Western Birds is not possible without their teamwork and dedication. Special thanks to Tom Gardali, who stepped down this year, after 10 years of service as a valued associate editor as well as reviewer. And many thanks to Lauren Harter, who stepped down after seven years as book review editor. I'm very grateful for the many varied perspectives Lauren brought us for views on current books in field ornithology. I welcome any suggestions or volunteers for a qualified new book review editor, someone who can continue recruiting reviewers with diverse perspectives, as Lauren did. I'm deeply grateful to assistant editor Dan Gibson, graphics manager Ginger Johnson, photo editor Peter LaTourrette, and webmaster/designer/typographer Tim Brittain for continuing in their roles as vital players in our team producing Western Birds.
